City of Waco Joins “Imagine a Day Without Water” Campaign

National Effort to Raise Awareness about Challenges Facing Water Infrastructure and Resources, Need for Investment

The City of Waco is joining in participation in the national advocacy and educational campaign, Imagine a Day Without Water.

Across the country, organizations, elected officials, corporations, environmental advocates, and more are joining together to educate people about the value of water, the challenges facing water and wastewater systems, and the need for investment.

For many, clean, safe, reliable, and affordable water comes out of the tap and flows down the drain without a second thought. However, massive infrastructure, much of it underground, is required to make that happen.

It has been estimated that a water main breaks somewhere in the U.S. every two minutes and while most pipes have an average life expectancy of 50 years, pipes in many major cities are more than 100 years old.

“We are thrilled that the City of Waco is joining Imagine a Day Without Water. The truth is, of course, we can’t go a day without water. For homes, that would mean no water to take a shower, make coffee, clean, do laundry, or flush the toilet. For businesses from restaurants to manufacturing plants, water is essential to daily operations,” said Radhika Fox, Director of the Value of Water Coalition. “During Imagine a Day Without Water, we’re speaking with one voice across the nation about how water is essential, invaluable, and needs investment.”

The goal for everyone participating in Imagine a Day Without Water is to spread the message that water is essential and that we must invest in it for future generations. Follow the City of Waco’s Imagine a Day Without Water messages on Facebook and Twitter.
